MUSIC AND DRAMA

Hobart Bosworth, who plays the principal male role in "The Iron Hand," the five-reel Universal-Red Feather production, which comes to the Plaza theater, was born in Ohio and when a mere lad, ran away to sea, landing finally in San Francisco. He made many futile attempts at different occupations, and then drifted into the theatrical profession. After many more trials and tribulations he won success playing with such celebrities as Augustin Daly, Henrietta Crossman, Julia Marlowe, Minnie Maddern Fiske and others.

He was one of the first big theatrical men to see the possibilities in the film industry and became one of the chief directors with the Selig Company. After forming "Bosworth, Incorporated," he produced such successes as "The Sea Wolf," "John Barleycorn," "The Valley of the Moon" and other famous Jack London stories. Jane Novak, considered the handsomest Bohemian actress on the American stage, plays the leading feminine role in "The Iron Hand," a strong five-reel story of a gangster's rise to power in the political world.

The photoplay was adapted by F. McGrew Willis from the story by George E. Hall and was produced at Universal City, Cal. by Ulysses Davis, the Universal director. Mr. Bosworth takes the leading role with Miss Novak and both are supported by Grace George, E. Clark, J. Curtis, William Mong, Frank Newberg and William Harris.

FAMOUS PICTURE AT THE LAMARA

"Under Two Flags" the Ouida novel which William Fox has made into a film triumph with Theda Bara in the leading role, is a story of French army life in Algeria. A dramatic swing and martial music run through the plot, which Miss Bara, by her superb acting, has interlarded with her usual art.

The story concerns Bertie Cecil (Herbert Heyes), heir of the English Viscount Rosalieu, who has shouldered the consequences of his brother's crime, and gone to Algeria, while he is mourned as dead by his friends and relatives. In the French camp, where he enlists, is a girl, Cigarette (Theda Bara), who is loved by all the soldiers.

Cigarette falls in love with Bertie, but she realizes that he is of a noble family, and knows that her position is hopeless. Chateaufort (Stuart Holmes), Colonel of the force, has formed a violent hatred toward the young man, who is enlisted under the name of Louis Victor. In an effort to get rid of his enemy, Chateaufort sends Bertie on an expedition against the Arabs, where he is almost certain to meet death. Cigarette, leading a troop of reinforcements, marches to the aid of the little band, saves the day of France and receives the Cross of the Legion of Honor.

Then the Lady Venetia (Claire Whitney), her brother, and Bertie's weak brother (Stanhope Wheatcroft), come to the camp. Venetia is in love with Bertie, whom she recognizes, and begs to come back to his title and estate. He refuses, and she falls sobbing on a couch. Chateaufort, who is passing, hears her sobbing, and rushes into the tent. He insults Bertie, who jumps on his superior, and beats him.

In the court martial that follows, Bertie is condemned to die. Cigarette, on the strength of her Legion of Honor Cross, gets a reprieve from the marshal of the troops, for the Englishman nobleman. Then she rides across the desert, to save the doomed man. Pursued by Arabs, she is forced to make a leap across a yawning chasm, on horseback. Even then, she is caught. She is allowed to go, but has to rush through a striding sandstorm before she can return to the camp. When she arrives Bertie is standing before the firing squad, ready to die.

Wildly shouting, Cigarette rushes forward. She is too late. The men fire as her horse dashes between them and Bertie's brave figure, and the bullets intended for the Englishman are lodged in the bosom of the brave French girl.

Around her fallen body gather the soldiers, who had loved her since she had toddled to them and had been taken on their knees. Bertie himself realizes that the poor girl is dying, and he rushes forward. He holds her head on his lap.

"It is nothing, this death," she says in a hoarse whisper. "I am ready for it. I am glad to do it, for I save the man I love. He has suffered long and without murmuring. I, too, can suffer without a sigh."

"I would be happy to die if only"—she looks longingly at those around her—"if only I could see France again. My loved France."

Her voice fades away. Her eyes close. Without a struggle, and with the name of her native land on her lips, she has died in the arms of the man she loved.

CLASSY CAST COMING TO THE COLUMBIA

To those who recall the sparkling comedy "It Happened in Honolulu," the announcement of the coming of the "Secret of the Swamp" to the Columbia with the same splendid cast will be welcomed with some surprise.

"The Secret of the Swamp" would imply from its title that it is a melodrama and in fact it starts out as such but the ending of the picture supplies the one novelty it is said of the current month in picture circles.

The story is laid in the south. Chet Wells rents a bit of ground from Deacon Todd for the purpose of demonstrating Chet's ideas of scientific farming but fails to make his experiment pay and then the deacon tries to force the payment of his rent. Chet's mother, who is an invalid, does and the young fellow incensed at the grasping old miser vows vengeance and there are several who hear him make the treat in the heat of passion.

Later when through a long chain of circumstances the deacon disappears and four play is suspected of the young ex-farmer is accused of the death of the deacon. It transpires that Major Burke has fired a shot in the direction of the old deacon some time previous when in a dispute over the latter's cows breaking into the major's pasture and he thinks he is the guilty man. He is much wrought up and supposed killing of the deacon and when he sees a flock of buzzards hovering over the swamp he concludes that his shot has been fatal.

Chet the farmer returning to press his love for the daughter of the major overhears the latter in his sleep reveal the suspicion that he has killed the deacon and he (Chet) gives himself up as the murderer when he is accused and directs the officers to search the swamp where he thinks the major has hidden the body.

Matters reach a high pitch when the village doctor, the knocking of Chet and the deponent is the most startling ever conceived for a picture. It is said to be the only new joke on the Ford card that has been sprung this year. At any rate it served to pack the Sumatra in Los Angeles all last week when the "Secret of the Swamp" played that house to one of the biggest wagers in the history.

A member of the Columbia firm had the pleasure of seeing the picture while in Los Angeles and is authority for the statement that it is a value seldom attained in the five reel features offered on any program.

ERNEST DOUGLAS IS NOW BENEDICT; GETS MARRIED SUDDENLY

Ernest Douglas has passed from the bright and sunny life of single blessedness to the dark vale of married burdens. The career of the bright young newspaper man was cut short yesterday afternoon, when he was united in marriage to Miss Nettie Dodi, of 520 East Moreland.

The news of his sudden passing will come as a distinct shock to his hundreds of friends in Phoenix. He arrived in Phoenix Friday night, from Jerome, and was seen about the streets apparently in his right mind. A great deal of surprise was expressed by his newspaper friends at seeing him in town, it being known that the heavy task of editing the Jerome News was a job to take care of most of one man's time. He volunteered the information that he was in Phoenix on "business," but never hinted at the weight of the "business."

Ernest Douglas was at one time one of the best known newspaper men in ranks as a reporter. He distinguished himself as a writer of catchy articles and stories that were copied far and wide. Feeling that his usefulness was of more value to himself than to his employers, he started in free lancing, and kept up his good reputation. About midway, sometimes disguised under the title of love, but better known as a "severe case." A few months ago, a dark rumor stirred about town that he was engaged, but Douglas, thinking to deceive his keen-eyed friends, stoutly denied it.

When the mining boom hit the state, Ernest Douglas was one of the first to take advantage of it. Finding that he had a natural leaning toward mining articles, he took them up as a steady diet. He made good from the start. Finding again that his talents were too valuable to waste on other papers, he leased the Jerome News, and started in for himself. His latest venture was an unqualified success. His friends were deep in their sympathy yesterday afternoon when it was learned that "Doug" had at last gone under.

At 5:35 last evening, the northbound Santa Fe carried Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Douglas towards Prescott. They will spend their honeymoon there, afterwards proceeding to Jerome, where the once brilliant young newspaper man has purchased a home.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Anna Dodi, of East Portland, and the sister of Bernard H. Dodi, a teller in the Phoenix Savings Bank & Trust company. She came here from Cincinnati with her mother several years ago, and has a large circle of friends.

Douglas is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Douglas of white Central avenue. He first saw the light of day in Arizona, being a native son in his old moments. Gila Bend claims that he was born there, although there has been a great deal of controversy over the matter.

calfe, Masters Ray Pace, Bee Glynn, Sanford Fox, Gordon Rockwell. The color scheme was prettily carried out in pink and white. Candy, cake, lemonade and fancy cookies delighted the little ones. The little hostess received many little mementoes of friendship.

ILL
Mrs. Newberry has been on the sick list; also Mrs. F. Dennis.

HERE FROM TEXAS

MONTOYA TO TEXAS

Montoya who has been held here in the local jail for some time pending the arrival of authorities to take him in charge was turned over to the Texas officials on August 31 and he will be taken to account for the dastardly crime he committed in that state.

DEATH OF MRS. NEVE

Mrs. Neve died in the Hayden hospital on Monday, where she had been a great sufferer for some time with Bright's disease. The remains were taken to the Winkelman cemetery for interment on Monday afternoon. She leaves a daughter and friends to mourn her loss.

LODGE LORE

LODGE LORE—
Phoenix Lodge No. 2, K. of P.

We are glad to learn that Knight H. C. Ray, who has been on our sick list for the past four weeks, is up and well again. Our sick list is clean now, there being no sick, so far as we know.

Election of representatives to the Grand Lodge being in order, the following were duly elected: B. E. Marks and H. B. Claffin, representatives; E. S. Curtis and O. E. Bellas, alternates. Our committees are quite busy now, and we can assure members that there will be something doing every meeting night.

Visiting Knight Ellis is quite busy these days and will demonstrate his ability as an entertainer in a short time.

The rank of esquire was exemplified in a very peculiar way and a surprise was sprung on all of the members of the lodge, and particularly on the keeper of records and seal, whom we must admit felt as though a dark horse had been brought to light on him.

We might remark that we are somewhat in sympathy with the keeper of records and seal, as he is somewhat bashful and we feel that there have been things done to him which are not covered by the by-laws.

However, we consider that the meeting was one of the most successful and enjoyable that we have had for some time. But they are getting better all of the time, brothers, and you had better come up and look us over a bit.

We went home full of deep thought and ice cream.

NOTICE

We are authorized by the administrator of his deceased father's estate to pay a suitable reward for information leading to the location of Foster Arttander Berwick, who was last heard from at Phoenix, Ariz., about the year 1901. If alive Mr. Berwick would be forty-five years of age.

FRICH & KELLY,

Attorneys at Law.

A Kenton O. photographer took a picture of his little daughter when she was only 15 minutes old. Just how it came that the father was allowed anywhere on the premises at that time is not explained in the dispatches.
